2025 Annual Message

Full Inclusion for All People—MORE's vision statement—has never felt more relevant than it does today. In a world where connection, empathy, and equity are so deeply needed, this vision continues to guide everything we do.

MORE is an extraordinary place to work. I'm continually inspired by our dedicated team, the individuals we serve, and the community that surrounds us. After 42 years, I still love this work. That's what has made the decision to "pass the torch" such a difficult one. But over the past four months, I've had the opportunity to fully experience just how right the timing is.

With Kelli Nuttall stepping in as MORE's new CEO, I am filled with confidence. She is a thoughtful, capable, and visionary leader. Add to that an exceptional Board of Directors—rich in experience, insight, and community influence—and a core team of staff ready to take the reins and carry the mission forward, and it's clear: MORE's future is in very good hands.

This message is my last in MORE's Annual Meeting Report—an issue that also celebrates new and continuing Board members, features the Mountain Democrat's front-page story on the transition, and reflects on the recent community gathering where Kelli and I stood side by side. That night, as we connected with community leaders, partners, and advocates, the response to this leadership change was overwhelmingly positive. Again, the message was clear: the timing is right.

Last year, I closed my message by saying that the people we serve want to be seen and heard. That remains true. But this year, I've come to believe that the three most powerful words in today's world may not be "I love you," but rather: "I hear you."

We're living through a time of deep division and disconnection. And yet, every day at MORE, I see how strong the desire is—for connection, for belonging, for joy. It's up to each of us to step forward, to rebuild, to truly listen. If we don't, we risk more confusion, more chaos.

Every relationship—personal or professional—thrives or falters based on the strength of our connection. When we ask someone, "What is it that you really want?" and we listen with compassion, their answer is often some version of:

"I want to know that I matter."

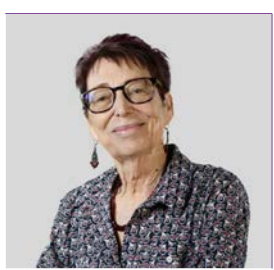

That kind of authentic connection holds incredible power. It fuels collective energy that can heal, illuminate, and transform—our organization, our community, and one another.

Let's connect.

With gratitude,

Susie Davies
